

BOB GILL as WAYLON JENNINGS BIOGRAPHY

Bob Gill is first call as Waylon Jennings. An international tribute act performing casinos and festivals throughout North America. When performing in Branson Missouri and many other casinos it is for an extended run of weeks at a time. His look and sound are authentic. Waylon's own repertoire is amazing and Bob Gill does over 200 of his best known songs.

Bob Gill has been singing since his early pre school years and has performed in varied phases from a one man band show incorporating the use of floor bass, guitar and beat box to a six piece cover country band. He has performed in Nashville and other venues across North America attracting growing audiences along the way. He has several albums to his credit and became interested in Waylon's music when he first heard him in the early seventies and since then has amassed a repertoire of most of the songs ever recorded by Waylon. During his travels he increasingly became compared to Waylon in both appearance and vocal style.

Since Waylon's untimely death in February 2002, Bob has had an inner desire to focus exclusively on preserving for eternity the music of his idol. When you hear Bob sing Waylon's music and close your eyes, you are immediately positioned in the midst of fans at any one of the late and great performer's concerts. When performing in Branson Missouri and many other casinos it is for an extended run of weeks at a time. His look and sound are authentic.